Hi, Howie,

Earlier this month, I visited Toronto to see some old friends. Since I had spent about a decade, as a graduate student at the University of Toronto as well as a research scientist at a private company in the 70s, the visit brought back wonderful memories. Although I had visited Toronto after I moved to B.C. and then to San Jose, it had been a while. Since I think it's one of the greatest big cities in the world, I'd move back to Toronto in a heartbeat if the weather was better!

Although I didn't take a lot of photos and videos on this trip, I have prepared a slideshow and a couple of short videos to share with the classmates:

Toronto Skyline viewed from Centre Island, which can be reached by a 10-min ferry ride from downtown.

Too bad that I don't travel with a tripod.

Rogers Centre (formerly Sky Dome). When Blue Jays came to existence, I actually went to see their second ever game. (The first game was on a Thursday afternoon, and I was already working.) I got over the team when they finally won the World Series in the early 1990s - two years in a row.
